50 Roslyn Gardens RUSHCUTTERS BAY NSW

An intelligently planned high-modernist apartment from architect Harry Seidler's most productive Sydney period, the Aquarius building is a well-kept secret amongst architects and designers. The building embodied a 1970s vision of the perfect lifestyle for the urban professional. Now surrounded by its well established garden, Aquarius offers both privacy and cosmopolitanism, with urban views and a pool for residents.

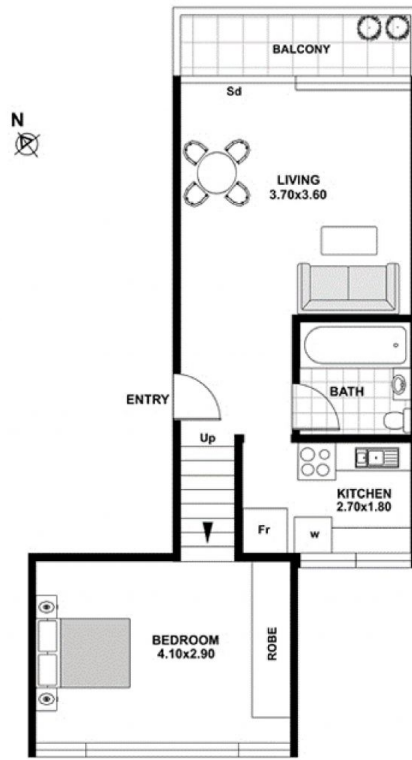

The apartment has a highly functional floor-plan, with a frankfurt style galley kitchen. The bedroom, on its own level, is designed with free-standing walls for improved sound isolation, and windows on both sides of the apartment allow for excellent cross ventilation. Parking is shared.
